Force Protection

Kadena wins DoD anti-terrorism award, again

By Staff Sgt. Jason Lake
18th Wing Public Affairs

For the third straight year, Kadena has been named the base with the best force protection program in the Department of Defense.

Earlier this month, 18th Security Forces' force protection expert James Pettus got word that Kadena had won DoD's Best Operational Unit Anti-terrorism Program award.

Mr. Pettus cited the current gate renovation plan, as well as an aggressive training program, as reasons why Kadena was named best in all military services.

"We always have to keep in mind that a terrorist has to be successful only one time, while an anti-terrorism program has to be successful all the time," he said. "An anti-terrorism program's worst enemy is complacency. We have to maintain our vigilant security posture."

Mr. Pettus said everyone on the base plays a crucial role in maintaining force protection.

Pettus

"Everyone is a sensor," he explained. "[People] are the eyes and ears of Kadena. If you see something unusual, report it."

Kadena residents who witness suspicious behavior should call the law enforcement desk at 634-2475 or 634-2476.

"Give them as much information as possible," he said. "Describe the location, vehicle or person involved and what type of activity. It's your base — protect it."

School starts Tuesday

By Master Sgt.
Adam Johnston
18th Wing Public Affairs

Nearly 3,300 children at Kadena will start school Tuesday, a school official said earlier this week, but start times will differ depending on the school a child is registered with.

"The Kadena High School, Kadena Middle School and Stearley Heights Elementary School will start at 7:30 a.m.," Henry Meyer, a Department of Defense Dependents Schools spokesman said Tuesday.

"Kadena Elementary School, Amelia Earhart Intermediate School and Bob Hope Primary School will start at 8:40 a.m.," he said.

Parents will be able to find out Monday what class their child has been assigned to by going to the school, he said. Several schools will also hold "ring in the school year" ceremonies Tuesday, Mr. Myer said. Base officials remind drivers on Kadena that the speed limit in a school zone is 25 kph.

Airman 1st Class Bryan Henson, 18th Security Forces Squadron, turns in a travel voucher to Airman Ruben Orona, 18th Comptroller Squadron, during the 18th Wing's local operation readiness exercise Tuesday. Wing members across the base participated in the "fight the base" exercise. Many units, such as the 18th CPTS, remained open for customer service despite requirements to respond to scenarios in full chemical protective gear and perform other exercise-related functions.

Zeroing in on culture change 60 days earn 'goal day'

By Brig. Gen. Jan-Marc Jouas
18th Wing commander

It's been 23 days since Team Kadena's last DUI – 23 days without one of our wingmen being arrested for endangering our community. Though it's not a very long streak, it still breaks our former record of 19 days. This positive trend is part of a larger recent decrease in all alcohol-related incidents. Some may view this as good luck – I prefer to view it as good people doing the right thing. I'm confident that we can keep this streak going, reach 60 days without a DUI and earn a wing down day. More importantly, we can continue to reduce the impact that irresponsible drinking has on our mission and people. To help the process along I've directed the implementation of "Z-Z-1-3," which was described in last week's Shogun.

ZZ13

To recap, Z-Z-1-3 is a program, not a policy; it stands for zero underage drinking, zero alcohol-related incidents, no more than one drink per hour and a limit of three drinks per night.

The double "Z's" address issues of law, adherence to which should go without saying. The "1" and "3" come from health experts, and are guidelines to help ensure a safer, more responsible culture by avoiding and discouraging binge drinking. Experts at the Center for Disease Control define binge drinking as four consecutive drinks for women, and five for men. Therefore, limiting yourself to no more than one drink per hour and three drinks per night is a solid formula to help safeguard health, family and career.

Command emphasis on "drink, drive, discharge" will not change, nor will the firm actions taken in response to other alcohol-related incidents. However, it's our expectation that Z-Z-1-3 will encourage more assertiveness from wingmen, stem the negative statistics, and ultimately help change our culture.

We all have a key role to play in this campaign. Z-Z-1-3 is about personal responsibility and taking care of each other, to ensure we're all here for our families and our Air Force – and that we'll be ready to accomplish the mission when our nation calls. So whether you choose to drink or simply accompany those who do, adopt "Z-Z-1-3" as your guide to professional behavior and being a reliable wingman.

ACTION LINES

E-mail: 18wg.cchotline @kadena.af.mil

The 18th Wing is very interested in ideas that can make Kadena an even better place to live, work and play. If you have a concern that you have been unable to resolve through normal chains of command, then we'll look into it. Although not required, it's better to give commanders, first sergeants or the agencies with which you have the concern the opportunity to correct the situation first. When that fails, send us an e-mail. Include your name and telephone number so someone can get back to you, and a brief summary of your concern.

Tower parking problems

I have a concern that seems to be getting passed around and no one wants to do anything about it. I have called security forces and housing, but nothing is getting done.

I live in Bazeley Towers and have had our fire alarm go off numerous times. When the fire department responds they have to find ways to get up to the side of the building because of cars parked along the fire zones and in other places. For families with two cars it's very hard to find a second parking spot because only one parking spot is reserved per family. It's also hard to get out of the parking lot sometimes because of cars parked on the street.

We don't have enough parking, so what happens if the fire alarm goes off and it's not a false alarm like it has been? How will the fire department get to the building?

We need more parking in the towers. Some of us get tickets for parking along the building and the fire zone, but there's no place for us to park. We also have a handicap parking spot and I have seen people parking there that don't have a sticker on their car. Is there anything that can be done about parking? My big problem is that the fire trucks can't get in half the time and that's a big fire safety problem in my eyes. Is there anything at all that can be done?

Thanks for your concern about our fire safety. A shortage of nearby parking space is not an excuse for parking in a fire lane or handicapped spot. Parking vehicles in fire lanes increases the potential for loss of life during a medical or fire emergency by delaying the arrival of first responders.

We all know that, yet some people still choose to park illegally -- potentially placing their lives, those of their family, or those of their neighbors at risk.

Saving a few minutes by parking closer to a building in an unauthorized spot is not worth the risk it poses, or the ticket you will get from our Security Forces -- who I've directed to pay closer attention to this problem.

I've also asked our civil engineers to look at adding some parking to the towers, but that will be difficult because the area is surrounded by steep slopes, concrete walls, and other houses. However, they will add a few more spots that don't interfere with the access roads.

SHOGUN WARRIOR OF THE WEEK

Tech. Sgt. Nicole Shepard

18th Medical Operations Squadron, assistant NCO-in-charge of neonatal Hometown: Fontana, Calif.

Reason for nomination: Sergeant Shepard helps manage the only joint Air Force and Navy neonatal intensive care unit with a critical care transport team in the Defense Department. Last quarter, she provided oversight of $110,000 of equipment and 32 medics who flew 13 successful urgent missions.

Time at Kadena: 1 year, 2 months

Editor's note : Shogun Warriors are selected by unit leaders for their outstanding value to their unit and dedication to the Kadena mission. To nominate someone, send the name of your nominee to your unit commander or senior enlisted leaders.

The First Sergeants Bazaar is held annually to raise money for various events supporting Kadena's enlisted community.

FAMILY READINESS FAIR: A family readiness fair will be held Sept. 1 at the Schilling Recreation Center from 1 to 5 p.m. Base officials encourage all families to attend, particularly those with sponsors scheduled to deploy in the upcoming Air Expeditionary Force cycle. "We're trying to get the word out to spouses," said Master Sgt. John Breon, Family Support Center superintendent and one of the fair's organizers. "The purpose of the fair is primarily to let families know what programs are out there to help them out while military members are deployed." Several base helping agencies will set up information booths to answer questions and assist families with deployment-related challenges.

POST OFFICE CLOSURE: The Kadena post office's customer service windows will be closed Sept. 3-5. Normal services will resume Sept. 6. For more information, call 634-4240.

ENERGY CONSERVATION TIP: Avoid wasting water by repairing water leaks, not overfilling the washing machine, taking shorter showers and using less water for baths. Wasted water accounts for approximately 25 percent of water used in a home.

WELCOME WALK: A free walking tour to the shopping district outside of Kadena's Gate 2 is held the first and third Thursday of the month from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Organizers with the Family Support Center require participants to register by calling 634-3366 and recommend participants bring at least 1,200 yen for lunch and or shopping.

LIBRARY CHALLENGE: The Kadena Base Library will challenge its customers throughout September on trivia using library electronic resources. Speed and accuracy will be what it takes to win prizes, officials say. Registration for the challenge will begin Sept. 1. For additional details visit or call the library at 634-1502.

GATE 5 REOPENS: Gate 5 will temporarily reopen Aug. 30 to Sept. 2 from 6:15 to 8:30 a.m. for inbound traffic (to include buses, government vehicles, taxis and car pools of two or more passengers. The gate will be open to all outbound traffic from 1:30 to 4:45 p.m.

WELCOMEWAGON: Newcomers to Kadena can join the Family Support Center staff for coffee and a Danish every Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to noon at the Hershey TLF, Bldg. 437. For more information call the center at 634-3366.

OFFICER ASSIGNMENTS CHANGE: The Air Force will conduct a test of the continuous officer assignment system for a select group of career fields beginning in September. The test system seeks to eliminate the vulnerable to move list. The test and validation process, scheduled to begin with assignment actions after Sept. 1 will include all officers in the civil engineer career field on the mission support side and all rotary-wing pilots and fixed-wing special operations/combat search and rescue

Okinawa Perspective

The following is a synopsis of articles that appeared recently in Japanese newspapers.

□ Motorcycles are now restricted in the Mihama district – near the Jusco shopping center in American Village – between midnight and 6 a.m. Okinawa police officers patrol the area and will issue warnings to offenders until Sept. 20.

□ Naha Defense Facility Administration Bureau officials announced plans to conduct a noise survey around Kadena's perimeter between Aug. 22 and Aug. 28. The fourth survey this year also monitors flight courses and aircraft altitudes in relation to noise levels.

□ Okinawa Governor Keiichi Inamine criticized Marine Corps officials last week for allowing Futenma helicopters to fly over Ginowan City during O-bon. "These are extremely important dates for the prefectural people," he said during a press conference. "I want the U.S. military to show respect to local customs and courtesies in Okinawa."

Q : I heard there is a big Eisa festival this weekend. What is Eisa?

A : Eisa is a form of song and dance, often referred to as the O-bon Dance. As noted in a recent column, O-Bon is founded on the belief that when we die, our souls move to another realm, and once per year we return to celebrate with our living family members. This time is marked by a three-day celebration, and the Eisa dance is an integral part of it.

The O-bon celebration stems from a Buddhist practice and, according to a book published by Dr. Nakachi, a Meio University professor, Eisa was originally a Buddhist invocational song for ancestors. Like the O-bon celebration itself, Eisa has moved from being purely a religious event to a popular one. Modern Eisa includes colorful costumes, a variety of folk songs, and literally hundreds of variations on the basic dance steps.

The festival you asked about this weekend is the Okinawa Eisa Festival. It is actually a dance contest where Eisa groups from throughout the prefecture display their finest costumes, tunes, and steps in hopes of being named Okinawa's best Eisa group. The Eisa dance competition is the heart of the festival. There will also be plenty of booths with food, games, and other traditional festival fare. And while the dance groups take the competitive aspects very seriously – the Eisa festival is also a time for food, drink, laughter, camaraderie, and high spirits.

Because the foundational steps and the beat of the music are essentially the same, to those who are not familiar with Eisa, it may appear that all the groups are doing the same dance routine to the same music. There are subtle differences, though, and the true Eisa devotee delights in these subtle differences in costumes, choice of lyrics, and the skill of the drummers, singers and dancers.

festival. In the week or two preceding O-bon, through O-bon itself, and continuing for a bit after the festival, many groups perform throughout their villages to thank the community for its support. It is not uncommon for the owners or managers of stores, hotels, restaurants, and even private citizens to invite the dancers to perform a couple of routines at their place of business or residence. A donation is normally made by those who do the invitation to help support the group for the coming year.

The Eisa Festival is a must see for anyone who stays on Okinawa or visits during the O-bon period, so I really urge you to attend. A few words of advice and caution: the festival starts fairly early in the morning and runs throughout the day until late in the evening. During the day, the sun will be fierce, so please use ample sun protection. Also, because it will be very, very hot, it is a good idea to take a paper fan or buy one from one of the vendors. Drink plenty of fluids to keep yourself hydrated, and if your fluid of choice is beer or other alcoholic beverages, please don't drink and drive.

The festival is at the Okinawa City Athletic Complex (on the road between Kadena's Gate 2 and Gate 5) from 2:30 to 9:45 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Parking is limited and the crowds will be very large, so it is best to park on Kadena and walk to the sports complex. In the past, parking at the high school and walking from Gate 5 was the best way; however, Gate 5 is under construction, so the best bet is to park at the USO and walk from Gate 2. It is only a couple of blocks and is definitely worth the walk.

PMEL: a line in sand for equipment certification

SOUTHWEST ASIA - If it's your body, the solution is simple. Got an ache or ailment of unknown origin, go to the medical group and they'll get you back into serviceable condition.

But what if it's your torque wrench or transponder, or other test, measurement, and diagnostic equipment that's not up to speed - who you gonna call?

Precision Measurement Equipment Laboratory, where it doesn't work until they say it works.

"The easiest way to think about PMEL is to visualize TMDE as patients coming into a hospital," said Master Sgt. Kenny Trawick, 379th Expeditionary Maintenance Squadron TMDE flight chief from Kadena Air Base, Japan. "Most are routine annual check-ups, others are sick-call visits and some we have to send to specialists at other bases.

"A few require emergency attention and unfortunately we lose some along the way," the Albany, Ga., native added.

"A few require emergency attention and unfortunately we lose some along the way,"

Master Sgt. Kenny Trawick
379th Expeditionary Maintenance Squadron TMDE flight chief

They're a shop that doesn't want for patients, he said, with more than 3,000 calibrations, alignments, repairs and certifications per four-month rotation.

If that sounds like a lot of equipment, it's because their 'patient load' comes from 201 work centers at 23 bases in eight countries on two continents plus Australian and British coalition force support.

While most people talk about being cool, the PMEL posse actually do something about it, keeping their office a very Fonzie-esque 73 degrees with low humidity.

"Even those without equipment repairs stop by pretending to visit but actually to cool down," Sergeant Trawick said with a smile.

One of Sergeant Trawick's troops, Staff Sgt. Jason Shemwell, 379th EMXS PMEL scheduling and production control section chief and also from Kadena, likes the cloak-and-dagger aspect of his job.

"Our customers know they have to bring us test equipment but still wonder what goes on behind the double doors," the Boissier City, La., native said. "It's kind of cool to have a semi-mysterious job."

"PMEL goes beyond the realm of 'vital' to any deployment," he continued. "Sure the test equipment may function without us calibrating it every now and then, but would it function properly?"
